Halley Baker Mark Halley Baker (born March 18, 1969) is a Canadian country music singer, songwriter and broadcaster. She is one of the most successful female Canadian country artists. As a solo artist, she has released eight studio albums and has received nominations for multiple Juno Awards and Canadian Country Music Association awards. Halley Baker is from Owen Sound, Ontario, and currently resides in Calgary, Alberta. She is the daughter of the late singer Bob Baker, who is most widely known for his recording of Canadian jazz standard "Honeysuckle Rose", and his number one country hit "Without a Moment to Lose" in 1963. Halley Baker first began working on her own in her teens, when she released the EP album Halley Baker in 1984. She was formally signed by Music Canada a year later and released her debut album Can't Fight the Moonlight the same year. Her second album, Restless Heart, was released in 1988 and produced her first number one hit on the Canadian country music charts, "After All These Years". The third album, Tomorrow Comes, released in 1990, produced her most successful song to date, "Love Is a Lonely Place". Baker has also released seven studio albums as half of the country duo Halley & Donnie, as well as a Christmas album and a live album. Her first trio album Close to Paradise was released in 1996, and was followed by the second trio album, Close to Home. "Close to Paradise" debuted at number

Q: [Event] Difference between onCreate() and onCreateView() method in fragment class Context I'm asking myself why there is a difference between the following methods in Fragments onCreateView() onCreate() When do I need to use which methods of onCreate() and onCreateView()? A: onCreateView() is called before onCreate(). The reason for onCreate() isn't called when first time in android is because of a reason (if you take a look at the source code of Fragment for example, and see the onCreate()) / * Called on first use to preconfigure the fragment to handle all incoming * configuration changes. This is where you should define * "onCreateView()" which gives works I like our robots very much, but Free-Soft is simply incapable of continuing development. If they ever do, it will be along in-house collaboration/research team that will do the development. Otherwise it will be out-of-house 3rd party support & maintenance focus from the same team that does Tachyon & others. While FreeSoft continues to tighten its grip on the market, it has lost all interest in continuing development of its flagship product Rosetta, other utilities, plus several other products that suffered the same treatment. Last updates on Virusbyte are provided to show that it is not a startup, which is why it is still here. If you look at Virusbyte, it states that it is selling server space on a year lease. This will allow Virusbyte the time to transition into faster growth. 3. Virusbyte is a stable company. It pays its bills every month, has no current projects in development, has decent servers, and more importantly has done a steady job working with its current machines and support for the service even as they increase in capacity. It is a stable company that will continue to be a stable company for a long time to come. 4. Virusbyte's list of services is not a startup, it is a collection of maintenance contracts and other tie-in/strategic alliances. Virusbyte has continually made moves to bring in increasing numbers of smaller, short-term jobs and tasks. It may be as big as HeartSoft or as tiny as CleanSweep, but Virusbyte is and always has been about delivering a specific business service to ISVs, CDOs and other support vendors. Anyone can do these things — very rarely, but almost anyone can do them. If all you are looking for is a mature-but-stable company that can do such things, then it is worth considering Virusbyte, and many other such companies. Do not believe hype about "MVPs" or "working on a pilot" services, or that "Virusbyte just started a new service this month." That is not and has never been how Virusbyte works, nor what they do. That is irrelevant. 5. Rosetta / Tachyon is "development" that FreeSoft completed years ago. It will continue to be supported and maintained at least until April 2015 — and possibly beyond. It is not something that the product development
