Requirement to run many games on Windows with support for complex graphics on the latest Nvidia, AMD andÂ .Denise Glesener was among those who were amazed to see Little Red enter the high-stakes world of advanced breeding. The 11-year-old was brought into the farm after her mother was found to be pregnant with triplets. It quickly became clear that one was not going to make it. The other two twins, a male and a female, were nursed and given protection for six weeks, but were not viable. They were sent to a rescue in Ohio. Little Red was the only dog who was nourished and nursed throughout the ordeal. "We did think about finding her another family, but it seemed cruel to ship her off again," Glesener said. She said she thought about adopting the dog herself, but was open to her best friends, Doug and Donna Blackford, adopting her. When Dr. Bert Wolff, a canine specialist from the University of Guelph, Ontario, discovered that Little Red had a heart murmur, he sent her to a specialist at the St. Vincent's Animal Hospital in Toronto. The facility had a surgery, which was successful. Little Red then spent about a month recuperating. "The surgery is a fait accompli, but she was a wreck when she came home. She was exhausted," Glesener said. "She would sleep a lot. She was very sluggish. She was a little scared of the vets and the dog that she had been with before. It took her a couple of weeks to get back up to speed." Little Red does have her bright spots. She is very friendly and loves everyone who visits the farm. She doesn't really get along with the other young dogs on the farm. The Blackfords had purchased the farm from its previous owners in 2004 and have been working it in a part-time fashion since then. As far as breeding, the Blackfords believe the farm has been good luck. "I bought the farm because I wanted to try to work with dogs and not just show dogs.
